

Blue Skies

[Verse]

Where the heart is cheerful, Where my soul is,
Where mother waited for me, Where the skies are blue,
There in the evening, The stars are like pearls,
The night is quiet, And the moon is shining so bright.
And if someone will suddenly come to hurt us,
We will protect each other like immovable mountains,
And it doesn't matter who we were before,
Because now we are brothers and sisters.

[Chorus]

When the bright sun will rise again, And the dew will fall,
Not too far in the meadow the nightingale will sing again.
The green field will bloom, and the wheat will turn yellow,
The loud song will sound in the blue skies.
The sun will rise, And the dew will fall,
The green field will bloom and the wheat will turn yellow,
The loud song will sound again in the blue skies.

[Verse]

Please explain to us what else can we do
To open people's eyes all around the world
Someone prefers to be deaf and blind,
But the child suffers and cries because home is burning,
The peace of this world is in our hands,
The time has come, the fate will smile upon us.
And it doesn't matter where we are now,
Because we are together as a family.

[Chorus]

When the bright sun will rise again, And the dew will fall,
Not too far in the meadow the nightingale will sing again.
The green field will bloom, and the wheat will turn yellow,
The loud song will sound in the blue skies.
The sun will rise, And the dew will fall,
The green field will bloom and the wheat will turn yellow,
The loud song will sound again in the blue skies.

[Bridge]

We all will return from afar
To our beloved home just like birds,
And we'll always be
Supporting each other,
Free and unconquerable.

[Chorus]

When the bright sun will rise again, And the dew will fall,
Not too far in the meadow the nightingale will sing again.
The green field will bloom, and the wheat will turn yellow,
The loud song will sound in the blue skies.

The dew will fall...
Blue Skies...
